Is your VPP audit near? Are you looking to educate your employees about VPP? Want to increase excitement and participation before OSHA arrives?

Then look no further, our 12 Week program does just that! It is a simple to follow week by week guide to marketing, educating, and employee participation.
Shooting for a Star. A 12 Week guide to your next OSHA audit.

Hang first set of banners and posters of VPP Management Principle #1. A brochure would go out to employees giving them an outline and explanation of how to participate in the upcoming weeks. What is even more important is the brochure will also explain “What’s in it for them”. Distribute Safety Star decal to safety department, management and VPP committee. This week we ask that these groups concentrate on catching employees doing something right. The decal will remain as a constant reminder that proper safety is noticed and appreciated.
This tool will give your push for Star Site or Recertification that extra kick. When completed, your employees will be more motivated as well as better informed. You may select to use the program in its entirety, or have one of our customer service representatives help you tailor it just for you and your budget. If your facility is going for VPP Star Site or Recertification, we can help.

The marketing aspect of the program involves the use of banners, posters, decals, etc. The education portion is accomplished through our VPP 101 DVD and booklets. Lastly, employee participation is achieved through different activities (Learner Cards, Off-the-job Safety, Hazard Recognition, etc.).

At the end of the program, all the activities can be sent back to AIM where AIM will tabulate your participation and employees can be rewarded.

Why 12 Weeks?

We feel 12 weeks is a good time span for promoting and educating your employees about VPP (not too long, not too short). However, if you don’t have 12 weeks, don’t worry. We have done this in as little as 4 weeks and as long as 6 months!
